

| Graduate Attribute | SLQF level descriptor | PLOs |
|--|------------------------------|-------------|
| Excellent command of the subject matter | 1,2 | 1,4,5 |
| Strong independent initiative | 4,6 | 5,7 |
| Flexible team player | 3,4,8,9 | 2,3,6 |
| Transferable skills and competencies | 3,4,5,6,7,8 | 2,3 |
| Research capacity for innovation and development | 2,3,5,9 | 4,5 |
| Critical reasoning | 1,2,3,5 | 1,4,5,7 |
| Values and ethics that would translate well in many professions | 10 | 6,7 |
| Multicultural competence | 10 | 3,6 |
| Confidence | 6,8,10 | 1-7 |
| Global citizens with a cosmopolitan outlook | 11 | 3,6,7 |
| Ethical human being capable of aesthetic appreciation and empathetic understanding | 11 | 6,7 |
| Lifelong learner | 12 | 1-7 |

PLOs:

1. Stemming from their exposure to the analysis of political institutions, processes, and actors, graduates will have the skills to both deploy concepts and theories to understand complex socio-political contexts, as well as critically engage in them with a view to progressive change
2. Graduates will possess skills in public administration, management, and public policy management, that will not only render them competent managers and administrators, but also actors who inform policy calculations for socially desirable outcomes
3. Upon completion of the degree programme, graduates will acquire effective conflict resolution skills that would prove useful in myriad situations ranging from workplace relations to the home sphere, and multicultural settings to international organisational contexts

4. Graduates will be capable of developing systematic, coherent, and independent knowledge on politics and society, while contributing to filling gaps in the existing body of knowledge in politics and government
5. Not only will graduates possess the capacity to apply the theoretical tools they have been introduced to in order to critically understand political dynamics and development of society, they will also have developed the training to theorise their socio-political contexts from the ground up
6. Based on their undergraduate training, graduates will have a strong commitment to upholding the spirit of justice and democracy, multiculturalism, and pluralism in their everyday capacities as professionals, citizens, and general members of society, motivated to intervene in social and political questions